INVOLVE YOUTH IN COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

Agencies of the U.S. Department of Agriculture offer a variety of programs for young people interested in community planning and development. By giving young people responsibility within your community, you can help them become better citizens while making your community a better place to live through their efforts.

The Agriculture Research Service, Forest Service, and Soil Conservation Service are just a few of the many USDA agencies that can provide summer jobs, intern programs, guides for individual community programs, and general information to young people and their communities. This booklet lists USDA agencies offering help to young people, describes the services they provide, and gives directions for getting in touch with specific agencies. 1973. 15 p. il.

this report presents the most significant fire safety problems and offers the greatest opportunities for fire loss prevention. Over $11 billion of our resources are wasted by destructive fires each year. More than 12,000 people are killed and tens of thousands are physically or mentally injured by fire.

The Commission feels that recommendations presented in this report, if implemented, will significantly reduce this great toll. 1973. 177 p. il.
